You are the pilots!

Millennials are going to shape the future

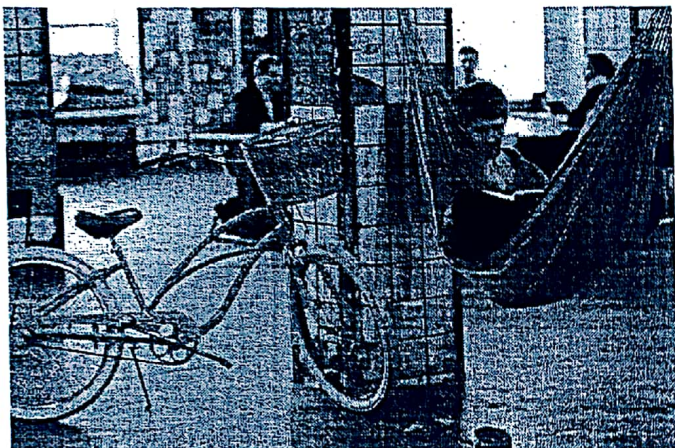

According to a study by PWC, Millennials will make up an estimated 50% of the workforce by 2020. It may sound startling, but that is only five years away.

Talk to them

Employee first

If you want staff to give great service, give great service to staff

Treat them like your customers

Power naps...at work? Some progressive organizations like Zappos, Google and Nike have created facilities on campus for employees to use when they need to get some rest, complete with beds, couches, soothing music and other sleep-inducing accessories. Others offer encouraging discounts for services at sleep "spas" like New York City's YeloSpa, which offers private rooms for rent for the purpose of 20- to 40-minute naps.

Timberland

Timberland is a worldwide brand with offices all over the world and headquarters in Stratham, N.H. They encourage their employees to enjoy life outside of work by giving them generous time-off benefits.

Employees can take service sabbaticals equaling 40 hours of paid volunteer work per year. Most employees are also eligible for an annual bonus. And to make that bonus stretch, every employee enjoys a generous discount on Timberland apparel, accessories, and, of course, footwear.

Ernst & Young

Talk about progressive! Ernst & Young, a London, UK-based global tax advisory service, offers the same benefits for same-sex partners as for opposite-sex partners -- even in states that don't recognize gay marriage.

The company fosters not only the professional development of its workforce, but also provides perks that benefit each individual personally. Other fringe benefits include concierge services, a working parents' network, and parental leave benefits.

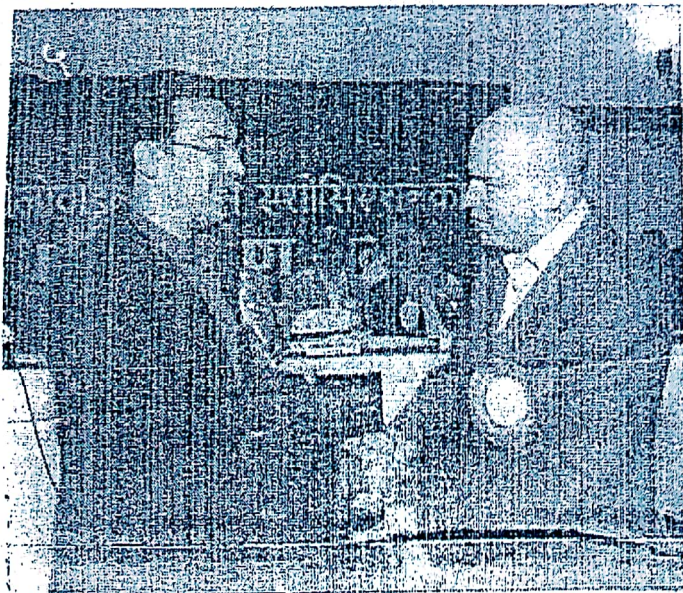

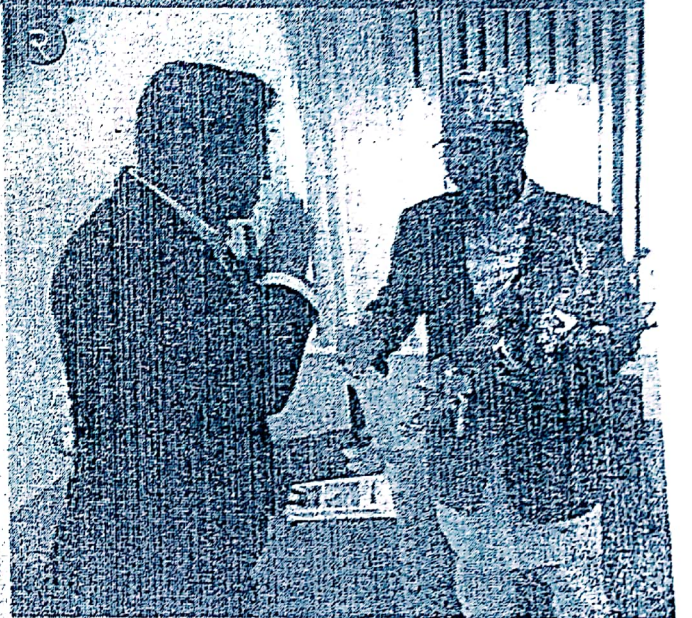

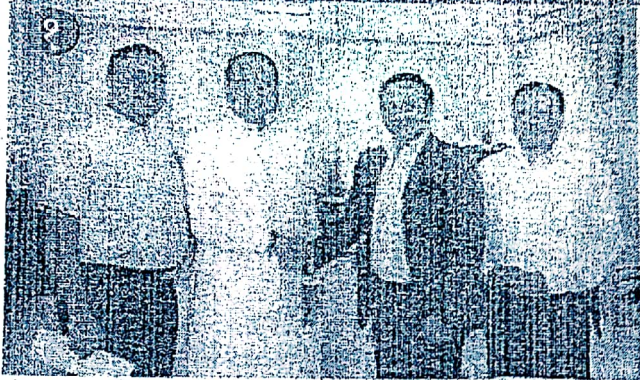

HAPPINESS

One Day I'll Be Successful and Happy.

Hum Hongey Kaamyaab...

I am a winner
I will step up
I will focus on good
I will try until I win
I will fall and get back up
I will win not give up
I am a leader
I am Unstoppable
Yes, I can
